

Cleaning the benchmark makes the no-leader result stronger, not weaker

If the exchanges' failure to anticipate book moves were an artifact of averaging books together, removing the artifact events would pull these lines toward 50%. They move the other way.

book_panel.log $3 · events are re-detected at each population, so non-overlap pruning runs over a population a detector actually produces. All six points $p < 0.02$ (sign test).